

Electromagnetic Hypersensitivity Study Research Participants Wanted

The University of Wollongong is conducting a study investigating the role of radiofrequency (RF) emissions, similar to those from mobile phones and Wi-Fi, on Electromagnetic Hypersensitivity (EHS).

We are seeking individuals who consider themselves to suffer from EHS to participate in this research.

You may be eligible if you:

- Are at least 18 years of age
- Suffer from EHS
- Are willing to be exposed to RF emissions (approximately equal to a mobile phone)
- Are willing to contribute 5 half-days to science

If you are interested in participating in this research or would like more information please contact:
